Zone Cases May Go to Councilmen

Lomita City Councilmen have amended the city's zoning ordinances to allow petitioners to appeal decisions of the Planning Commission to the full council.

Action on the matter was taken Sept. 13 and was necessary because Los Angeles County zoning ordinances, adopted by the city upon incorporation, do not allow appeal from the Planning Commission to the Board of Supervisors.

"When such injustices are brought to our attention, the City Council has taken the necessary steps to correct them," Mayor Clyde S. Bernhardt said.

The amendment permits residents to appeal recommendations of the Lomita Planning Commission directly to the city council.

In another action, the council approved a contract between Lomita and the State of California for preparation of a general plan. Under the contract, the city will receive $12,500 from the state to develop the general plan.

Minimum Goal Reached In Chamber Expansion

The Torrance Chamber of Commerce has surpassed its minimum goal for the "Keep Pace With Opportunity" program. Chamber President Bruce Jones announced Thursday.

The chamber tallied $54,734, Jones told some 50 workers attending a report meeting Thursday. The minimum goal had been set at $54,375.

The "challenge goal" of $60,125 will be reached when workers complete their canvass of prospects and when firms with headquarters outside Torrance hear from their home offices about their subscriptions, Jones said.

The drive netted 28 new members for the chamber and resulted in an increased annual pledge from 86 current members. The total subscriptions reported Thursday amounted to $3,625.

George W. Post and Arthur L. Reeves served as general co-chairmen of the drive. Martin M. Denn and Leonard A. Ensinger were co-chairmen of the business groups division. Harry L. Weaver and G. S. Williamson were co-chairmen of the 28-man prospects committee. Lloyd A. Wilson of San Francisco directed the local campaign, which included a total of 149 workers, Jones said.
